Childhood Cancer Awareness Month

September 2026

What is Childhood Cancer Awareness Month?

Childhood should be filled with learning, playing, and growing. But cancer can replace these everyday moments with hospital visits, treatments, and uncertainty. This Childhood Cancer Awareness Month, ACCE stands with children facing cancer and the families beside them. Having supported a patient as young as 11 months old, we believe every child deserves a fair chance to access the care they need, and every family deserves support along the way.

Did you know?

Childhood cancers are different
 Childhood cancer is not simply adult cancer at a younger age. Children are more likely to develop leukemia, lymphoma, and brain or bone tumours. Leukemia is the most common, with 290 children aged 0–14 years diagnosed in Canada in 2023. Childhood cancers can have different genetic changes, so treatments that work for adults may not work the same way for children.

Screening is rarely an option
 Most childhood cancers cannot be prevented or found through routine screening. Many are linked to gene changes that happen by chance, with no known cause. This makes recognizing unusual signs and getting a timely diagnosis especially important.

Survival depends on where you live
 A child's chance of surviving cancer can depend on where they live. According to the World Health Organization (WHO), more than 80% of children with cancer are cured in high-income countries, compared with less than 30% in many low- and middle-income countries. Delayed diagnosis and limited access to treatment and essential medicines are major reasons for this gap.

4 Ways to Help Your Child Through Cancer

Explain cancer in simple words
 Tell your child what is happening and what to expect, one step at a time.

Prepare your child for changes
 Explain changes early and let them choose a scarf, toy, or comfort item.

Keep life connected
 Help your child stay connected with friends, school, and things they enjoy.

Remember that you're a parent, too
 Let others help with everyday tasks, and make space for yourself to recharge.
